GUTEAU'S WIDOW
DIES IN OMAHA

Divorced from President Garfield's Assassin. She Testified Against Him at the Trial.

OMAHA, November 5.—The widow of Charles J. Guiteau died recently at her home, in Omaha, where she had lived in retirement for years. In this city she had been known as Mrs. Anna C. Allen, and the fact that she was the wife of the assassin of President James A. Garfield had been kept so secret that comparatively few persons knew that the quiet Mrs. Allen had figured in one of the great tragedies of American history.

Throughout her Omaha residence, Mrs. Allen persistently refused to talk of the nightmare period of her life, and it was only from a word now and then dropped by her that the full story is known.

"That is past; let it rest," was the usual way in which she was wont to put off any attempts to question her concerning Guiteau. For several years she made her home with her son-in-law and her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Williams, at No. 817 Manderson street, where she died last week. The name Garfield does not appear on her graves stone.

Mrs. Guiteau's maiden name was Bush. While living in Ixopo, Ill., she met Guiteau, in 1877. Even in those days Guiteau leaned toward anarchy and had peculiar ideas of government. Considering her co-operation and marriage, Mrs. Allen was always reticent, and even with her daughter, Mrs. Williams, she never discussed those days. That they were unhappy ones, however, is known. But they did not last long. Within two years from the wedding day Mrs. Guiteau obtained a divorce on the plea of cruelty. Guiteau was subject to violent and tempestuous temper.

After her divorce from Guiteau Mrs. Guiteau went to Boulder, Colo., where she in 1879 married a prospector named Dumaine. While the Dumaines were residing in Boulder the news came that Garfield had been shot by Guiteau.

"I earnestly believe that is my first husband," Mrs. Dumaine is reported to have said on that occasion. "He is thoroughly worthy of the dead."

Then came the long trial in which an attempt was made to prove that the assassin was Guiteau. Then the government passed its big trump, Mrs. Dumaine was called to the witness stand. She told up the facts she had lived with Guiteau, told of his violent temper, and of his unscrupulous ways.

While Guiteau awaited his death in custody, he was allowed to go to the waterfalls of his soul. She brought him a Bible, and it is what she could do bring about his repentence.

In 1886 Mrs. Dumaine and her son had separated and she obtained a divorce. She married Ernest Allen in Chicago. Again there was a separation, and Mrs. Allen moved to Omaha. Five years ago she got a divorce from Mr. Allen.
